TRADE IN AUTOS

O. W. TARR OPENS BUSINESS IN SECOND-HAND CARS

A number of months ago O. W. Tarr and C. L. Hare opened The White Supply Station, at the corner of S. Louise and Broadway, for furnishing autos with oil and gasoline. The business was for a time under the charge of C. L. Hare, who is now conducting the road part of the undertaking. O. W. Tarr himself is now acting as manager of the supply station. As the automobile has come more and more into use the number of supply stations has increased. There are now six of these stations in Glendale.

In this way the business is pretty well divided up. Mr. Tarr found in the course of his communications with customers that there is always a considerable trade in second-hand autos, but that for want of convenient places of exchange, which are not to be found outside of the business garages, quite a deal of business was either not done or was not attempted to be done.

This gave him the idea of starting in addition to his supply station an auto exchange and sale business. Up to this point he has been successful in what he has undertaken.

"It is manifest to everyone that the auto business is increasing every day," said Mr. Tarr. "Scarcely a day passes without some inquiry being made of me about the possibility of selling a slightly used car. Some of the inquiries are casual; others are genuine and bear business. This determined me to start in the car sales and exchange business. For some time past I have been assisting people to dispose of their cars as an accommodation. Now I am making a business of it.

"I am accepting cars at my station—The White Supply Station—and parking them here throughout the day without charge. I also store them in a garage at night without charge. This is done until they are sold. Naturally I charge a small commission for my trouble.

"I am certain the business is going to grow. I have already sold several cars for customers and I have now got several customers who are on the lookout for second-hand cars. I am a good judge of cars and customers will find that I am able to serve them well with my knowledge and experience.

"This week eight different parties have made inquiries about second-hand cars. The supply of the article is quite considerable. I intend to have a man working on the outside. When he reports a prospect I will go out myself and investigate it.

"If the car reported is worth while I will clean it up, make the necessary repairs and put it into working order and I anticipate no difficulty in selling such cars. The trouble at present is to get cars to sell. The demand for used cars of all kinds is growing every day and with such a market I anticipate soon to be doing a business that will be satisfactory to my customers and fairly profitable to myself."

ENGAGEMENT PARTY

MISS MARY JANE EVANS AND LOUIS COOLE TO BE WEDDED IN NOVEMBER

Entertaining a number of her girl friends at a charmingly appointed one o'clock luncheon, Saturday last, Miss Dorothy Hobbs of North Central avenue, Tropic, delighted and surprised her guests with a genuinely original method of announcing the engagement of two very popular members of the Valley's younger set.

In arranging the setting for this most pleasant surprise, the hostess obtained a very unique and beautiful effect. Banked in the center of the prettily appointed dining table was a mass of white rosebuds, half hidden by a veil of asparagus plumosis, while here and there perched upon the greenery were tiny bluebirds at rest. Suspended from the electrolux was a canopy of the same feathery green foliage, bearing bluebirds poised for flight. Cut glass candelabra supporting hand-painted shades showing the bluebird, in silhouette graced the table and again the bluebird on the wing designated the various place cards.

In this lovely setting, so emblematic of purity and loyalty, a course luncheon was served which as it progressed, grew more and more interesting until as a finale the ices were served and then it was that the bluebird told his secret. Perched upon a branch projecting from each dish was a bluebird, at rest, carrying in its tiny bill a correspondingly diminutive envelope which contained the announcement of the engagement of Miss Mary Jane Evans to Mr. Louis Coole with November as the time of the important ceremony.

The afternoon was spent in the shade of the graceful pepper trees at the Hobbs residence, where the guests made use of their handiwork in the stitching and hemming of linens for the bride-to-be. Toward the close of the pleasant afternoon a congratulatory telegram was received by Miss Evans from Miss Kathleen Dodge, who is now attending school at Berkeley.

The guests were: Miss Mary Jane Evans, Miss Pauline Hamilton, Miss Amie Miller, Miss Grace Beach, Miss Lola Mae East, Miss Vera Bayard, Miss Carol Willisford, Mrs. Glenn Craig, Miss Catherine Lord, Miss Katherine Hobbs, Mrs. John Hobbs, and the hostess, Miss Dorothy Hobbs.

GREATER TROPICO

When its municipal jurisdiction shall have been extended to cover the entire territorial area that constituted its former school district it will be possible for Tropic to come again into its own and become Greater Tropic. This territory is all that scope of country along the east, south and west boundary of the city, with the Verdugo Road, the south line of the Hunters and Los Angeles river as its east, south and west boundary. It includes the Park avenue tract, the C. C. Chandler tract, Tile works property, Angeles Park tract, Atwater tract, Robert Devine tract, Brent tract, McWhorter and Hunter ranches, Handorffs between the S. P. railroad and Los Angeles river, Glassell Park, the Glassell ranch and adjacent properties.

True, all the area described is within the territorial limits of the city of Los Angeles, but for all that, it belongs in Tropic, and for a Greater Tropic should be brought under the municipal jurisdiction of such city.

For the negotiation of the return to Tropic of this territory a commission should be established and the work of it begun at once.

It is especially desirable that Tropic municipal jurisdiction extend to and cover the territory along the Los Angeles river. Its business interests, industrial, commercial and general welfare, demand it. What finer field for the development of industrial enterprise and consequent resources of municipal power than this?

BRITISH ARE CLOSING IN ON THIEPVAL

GEN. HAIG'S MEN CAPTURE STRONGLY DEFENDED FIELD WORK AT MOUQUET

(Special Service to Glendale Evening News)

LONDON, Sept. 18.—Credit is given to the new British war device, a species of traveling land fort, that climbs walls, tramples over houses, leans against strong fortifications and breaks them down, and all the while pours a stream of machine gun and field artillery fire on the opposing army, for the victory won Saturday and Sunday. The British did not intend to take either Martinpuich or Mouquet yesterday, but the British troops had pushed on so much farther than anticipated that word was given to take those places, which were speedily in the hands of Haig's men. Thiepval is now almost entirely surrounded by the British.

It was their practice to lure their victims into certain houses, place them in compromising situations and having obtained photographs of them there force them to give up thousands of dollars. One man paid $40,000 and one woman $35,000. Four men and three women are under arrest.

JUDGE WORKS SPEAKS

CHARTER COMMITTEE SECURES SPEAKER, AUTHORITY ON CITY GOVERNMENT

As previously announced, Judge Lewis R. Works delivered an address in the city hall, Glendale, Saturday evening, under the auspices of the Charter committee of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce. The meeting was called to order by Atty. Frederick Baker, chairman of the Charter committee. Mr. Baker explained as to the origin of the Charter committee, stating that at the beginning of the present year, the president of the Chamber of Commerce recommended that a committee of fifteen be appointed to be known as a Charter committee, whose duty it would be to make a study of municipal government and at such a time as this committee should decide that the people of Glendale would be ready to consider the adoption of a Freeholders' Charter a mass meeting would be called and a Freeholders' Charter committee of fifteen would be elected by the people. It would then be the duty of this committee to prepare a Freeholders' charter and ask the city trustees to call an election to allow the voters of the city of Glendale to approve or disapprove of its adoption.

Mr. Baker in his introductory remarks explained that the difficulty that cities have in adopting a Freeholders' charter is not that the charter as prepared is without merit but because it usually is the case that only members of the committee become fully informed as to the perfect working of a modern Freeholders' charter and the people in general are not educated up to its need and when the day for the election comes its adoption is voted down. Mr. Baker reminded those present that the only way to have the citizens of Glendale adopt a Freeholder's charter is to have it brief and prior to election to have the voters understand the honesty of its purpose.

Judge Lewis R. Works is an entertaining speaker. He uses good language, says just what he wants to say and what he does say is good sound common sense. His subject was modern city government. The speaker went back to the origin of city government. He explained that the government of the cities in ancient Greece and Italy were the important factors in the government of those nations. Problems of city government are the important problems of the age and in fact have been the important problems of all ages. The center of the Roman empire was the city of Rome. The government of Greece comprised the government of many small cities in Greece. The destiny of the cities of these countries determined the destinies of the countries in which they were located. The government of the world is the government of cities. Of late years people are leaving the country and locating in the cities. In the middle west the population of the rural districts has decreased while the population of the cities has increased. When freedom was obtained from Great Britain, the first step taken was to establish a national government. No attention was then given to city government. The constitution of the United States provided for the executive department (the president); legislative department (Congress); a judicial department (the courts). The states as they were formed patterned after this form of government. The executive department (the governor); legislative (the general assembly) and the judiciary (the courts). In the early history of the United States as cities were established the same plan was followed for city government, the executive (the mayor); the legislative (members of council, etc.).

The commission form of government became popular at the time of the first great Galveston flood and disaster. The Galveston city council was not able to cope with the situation and the people came together and elected three commissioners and the governor appointed two, so these five commissioners served as a body to solve the problems of the city. So successfully did this Galveston commission perform its duty that other large cities in Texas adopted the commission form of government and at the present time there are a large number of cities in the United States working under the Commission form of government. And like all other forms of government its success depends upon the ability of the men who make up the commission.

The commission form of government of cities comprises from 3 to 7 commissioners, according to the population of the city. Each commissioner is placed at the head of a department and at stated times all com-

Pixley's Sunday school class of the West Glendale Methodist church, enjoyed a delightful outing as the guest of Mrs. Pixley, at her cottage at Hermosa Beach, over the week end. The girls went down to Hermosa Saturday morning and remained until Sunday evening. The time was filled with the pleasures that can only be enjoyed along the seashore. A wienie roast on the sand, bathing and a trip to Redondo, where they enjoyed the amusements at that popular resort, were some of the features of the outing enjoyed by the Misses Helen Bott, Ruth Spafford, Helen Gould, Irene Jones, Mabel Robbins, Tessa Bott, Eva Gould and Marjorie Singleton. The party was joined on Sunday by Miss Olive Pixley and the Misses Mildred and Florence Carey.

PRE-NUPITAL DINNER

Pulliam, Mrs. Flint and Mrs. Lauer assisted Miss Wells in receiving the guests, who greatly admired the roomful of beautiful articles.

DEATH OF MRS. HOUGH

Mrs. Ellen Elizabeth Hough passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Hansen, 235 S. Isabel street, Sunday, September 17, at the age of 69 years. The deceased leaves to mourn her death three daughters. Mrs. Hough came to Glendale from Monterey about three weeks ago to visit her daughter and her death was very unexpected, her illness being of only three hours duration.

Funeral services will be held at the home Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. Interment will be in Forest Lawn cemetery. The Jewel City Undertaking company is in charge.

WEATHER FORECAST—Fair tonight and Tuesday, foggy along the coast; westerly winds.

missioners come together as a legislative body.

Experience has taught the people that a city is a business institution, a public utility and should be governed in the same way that any well regulated business is governed. The officers of a city are to be compared to the officers of a business corporation. Every well-regulated business corporation employs a manager or a superintendent upon whom rests the responsibility of successfully superintending the business of the corporation. The responsibility of city government should rest upon only a few people. The city charter as framed by the states is not well adapted to all classes of cities.

For a city to have the very best government possible her people should get together and agree upon a charter suiting local conditions and right here Judge Works placed considerable emphasis upon the remarks made by Mr. Baker in reference to the committee appointed to prepare the charter becoming familiar with modern city government, while the average citizen does not become educated as to the superiority of the modern methods in city government and of course very naturally votes against any Freeholders' charter that may be presented for adoption. Judge Works therefore emphasized the importance of carrying on a campaign of education in this line before a charter is presented to the people for adoption.

Political influences and political appointments should be guarded against in conducting city government. The glad hand custom often puts at the head of a department a man who is not fitted for the work in hand. No reason why a city should not go out into the world for a competent and trained city manager if that is necessary.

DESERT POTASH DEPOSITS

It has been recently decided by the Superior Court of California that the vast deposits of soda and potash, contained in Searles lake, on the Mojave desert, are the property of the California Trona company and that the contestants, who are said to have been acting in behalf of German firms, have no rights in the rich holdings. This is an important decision. It is equally important as the court pointed out that the United States may condemn this property under the right of "eminent domain."

Searles lake has had an eventful history. In the old days it was thought valueless and though staked by various prospectors, on chance, it was seldom thought of sufficient value to induce any one of its locators to do the assessment work on it. Afterward its value became apparent and it went through the vicissitudes of all such holdings. It was finally located by a California company, whose difficulty seemed to be lack of capital. Then it was that foreign capital came into the question. An English company purchased the stock or part of the stock of the company.

When it became known that the salt deposits of Searles Lake, on the Mojave desert, were immensely valuable there began a struggle for possession of it that was characteristic of the greed of humanity. A company of would-be jumpers from San Francisco one time motored down to relocate the lake and its valuable contents. This party was ignorant of the desert and its dangers and peculiarities.

Generally a strong wind is blowing on the desert. It is a persistent wind and a nerve-racking wind. Women often cannot stand the strain on the nerves caused by this wind. The day the jumpers motored down from San Francisco the wind was blowing half-gale and the sun was pouring down its rays producing a temperature in that open spot of somewhat about 145 degrees Fahrenheit. To people accustomed to the desert and thoroughly acclimated these conditions may be all right and while inconvenienced by them they may not suffer from them.

Imagine, however, a company of Market street brokers and business men from San Francisco in such a place. Just as they came to the lake a puff of wind blew off the hat of one of the party. He ordered the auto stopped. The wind was carrying his hat out over the surface of the lake. He ran after it and as might have been expected got stuck in one of the sloughs of salt and potash in which the lake abounds. He was pretty well out on the lake's surface at that time and could not extricate himself and there, held fast under the deadly sun, with his friends making frantic efforts to extricate him, he got a sunstroke and died.

The lake contains several billion dollars' worth of potash and other salts and if the present decree holds and the California Trona company is confirmed in its title the members of that corporation will be millionaires. However, Uncle Sam may step in and take over the whole affair for the good of the country. The United States has the right to do so. It would also be a wise thing to do, seeing that the potash of the lake might prove the salvation of this country in the time of war. The United States has no other great deposit of potash and might have to rely entirely on the potash manufactured from the giant kelp of the Pacific ocean.

PROTECTING THE CANAL

Though the Panama Canal has had a great deal of trouble with earth slides ever since its completion there is every prospect that that difficulty will be overcome. The canal engineers have been working vigorously for the past eleven months and have removed all the earth that slid into the cut at Cucuracha. These slides were anticipated and foretold by Col. Goethals and it was characteristic of that brave and skilled engineer that he should have given up his resolve to leave the Canal zone and remain there to see the situation cleared up.

The United States is well aware of the strategic value of the Canal. It is of even greater significance to this country than the Kiel canal is to Germany. The Kiel canal connects two inland seas. The Panama canal is the link between two worlds. The nations of the world envy the United States the possession of this waterway. They know that through that passage the wealth of the East will pour into the lap of the West. They know that the nation that holds that link will be the leader in the Pacific.

The United States of America is keenly interested in seeing that anything that will materially affect the interests of the Canal and its own interest therein shall be carefully looked into and kept in hand. Just at present the countries of Latin-America are greatly exercised because the United States government has intimated that it will repudiate the decision of the Central American Court of Justice, which denies Nicaragua's right to sell any interest on Fonseca bay to the United States without the consent of Salvador and Honduras.

Both Salvador and Honduras have protested against the deal. They hold that the bay is part of their coast line and that they have an interest therein according to the law. Costa Rica has protested against Nicaragua's giving up any rights in the San Juan river, which forms the boundary line between these two countries.

The Central American republics have carried the case to the International court at Cartago, which was formed in Washington, D. C., in 1907, under the guidance of the United States. Secretary of State Root presided over the conference at which the tribunal was constituted. Up till now no Latin-American republic has dreamed of consulting this court. Now, however, they see in it a means of annoying the United States, which must secure certain strategic point if it is to guard the Panama canal. The Central American republics, with the example of the past before their eyes, are determined to get paid in full for whatever concessions they may grant to the United States.

It is likely therefore that the deal with Nicaragua will be consummated. The leading politicians of that republic will get the $3,000,000 compensation offered by this country and the United States will sit down there and build the necessary fortifications. Meanwhile it might be well to ascertain what are the secret foreign influences that have been at work in Central America and South America stirring up sentiment against this country. It is necessary to safeguard the Panama Canal. It is also necessary to secure to this country the option of obtaining the Nicaragua route if necessary. If the Monroe doctrine protects this country at all it protects it in these laudable objects.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Rev. W. E. Edmonds was welcomed upon his return from his vacation on Sunday morning by a large congregation who listened to an able discourse upon the text found in Isaiah 53, "He was despised and rejected of men." As a symbol the Cross is familiar to all the world but it is a question in the minds of many whether too much is not made of it as a symbol merely, too many forgetting the being who hanged upon it. For that which the Cross represents is not popular with the world, you cannot bring them together and harmonize them, there is enmity between the cross and the world. The cross is an offense to and condemns the world; as long as selfishness exists the two cannot harmonize. But of this be assured, you cannot love both, with which will you take your stand? But whatever your action may be, you may be assured of this, the power of the Cross will never diminish but ever become stronger. The foundation of the world's ideals is selfishness. Our school houses stand for ideals, but what do those ideals amount to if the true and permanent foundation of our ideals be taken away? How can our schools teach a morality that is permanent and worth while if the only foundation of true morality, the Bible, is kept out of our schools? No one is asking that theology be taught in our public schools, but the time is coming when the people will insist that the splendid literature and those portions of the Scriptures that inculcate invaluable spiritual truths shall be presented to our children in their purity. The Bible is also the foundation of the home; home life is imperfect if the Bible is kept out. No ideals are worth while which are not founded upon that which the Cross represents. And this cross is not to be taken up occasionally, as on Sunday, but "Let him take up his cross daily." The cross is an offense to the world because it presents the only plan of salvation. You must enter Heaven by the way of the cross, you cannot get in by the door of Ethical Culture, or any variety of "New Thought." Jesus has said, "I am the Door." Take up your cross and follow Him, by no other means can you enter into the presence of the King.

INVITATION TO MEMBERSHIP

The Tuesday Afternoon club will begin a new year of work, Tuesday, Oct. 10, and cordially invites every lady of Glendale or its vicinity to become a member of this splendid organization. The Board wishes to correct this impression: To become a member one must be indorsed by two women who have been members of the club a year or longer. The entrance fee of $3.00 must accompany the application. The annual dues are $3.00, payable $1.50 in October and $1.50 in February. Any one wishing an application blank can obtain the same from Mrs. H. E. Bartlett, president, phone Glendale 1426-W; Mrs. S. C. Packer, treasurer, Glendale 947-W; or Mrs. H. P. FOOTHILL CLUB

Mrs. Alexander Mitchell was hostess on Friday to the members of the Foothill club, whom she entertained delightfully at La Ramada. She was assisted in entertaining her guests by her two charming daughters, Misses Lorraine and Barbara Mitchell. The afternoon under the wide-spreading trees of La Ramada was one thoroughly enjoyed by the members of the club and a tree guessing contest was particularly appropriate for the occasion. In this game Mrs. W. W. Stone was fortunate in winning as a prize a wooden candelabra of ancient and beautiful design. Victrola selections throughout the afternoon were appreciated and the guessing contest was followed by five hundred in which Mrs. C. H. Toll was the prize winner. Lovely refreshments were daintily served on the tables in the arbor. This was one of the most delightful meetings of the Foothill club.

Most great men do not look the part; You'll notice every day That when a man is very smart He never acts that way.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON CLUB

The members will please read in this issue of the Glendale Evening News the address given at the city hall, Saturday evening, by Judge Lewis Works of Los Angeles. This was the first of a course of lectures to be conducted under the auspices of the Charter committee of the Chamber of Commerce, consisting of fifteen members, of which Attorney Frederick Baker is chairman. They will secure as lecturers those who can best handle their subjects.

These lectures are in line with our study section, "Political Science and Civics," in our Club, therefore let us avail ourselves of this splendid opportunity of studying the problems of City Betterment, for we are especially concerned in each branch of City government.

This is indeed a relief to your Chairman, who will have all her time now to work on "Civics," and with every citizen, to beautify our streets with trees.

In conclusion let me urge every one to attend this course of lectures, which will take place on Saturday nights and will be announced beforehand.

ELLA W. RICHARDSON,
Chairman of Political Science and Civics.

BIRD AND FLOWER CLUB

A most delightful treat was afforded the members and friends of the Bird and Flower club on their trip Saturday afternoon to Verdugo Park, when Miss Emma-Lindsay Squire told her entranced listeners about the various birds she has tamed. A pretty picture the speaker made, standing under noble trees through whose branches the afternoon sunlight glinted on her curly hair, her eyes sparkling with animation or filling with loving tears as she related her exquisite experiences with helpless baby birds. The tender story of the lonely sea-gull, Skygack she named it, unable to fly, nursed with olive oil and nourishing food, who lived amongst the family chickens,—Skygack who loved his gentle mistress yet pined for strength to rejoin his companions of the sea and air,—to whom finally returned power of wing and ability to fly,—Skygack who one day raised his snowy pinions and disappeared with a flock of sea-gulls across the sky, yet after a week and again after a month came back to visit his human friends and to say goodbye to his much loved benefactress,—this charming story will forever live in the memory of those privileged to hear it.

At the next meeting of the Bird and Flower club, this coming Saturday, members and friends will meet at Headquarters, 1111 Broadway, at a quarter to twelve, leaving on the five minutes to twelve car for Verdugo Park, where lunch will be eaten,—returning to Glendale by the eight minutes past four car from the Park. Adults and children, not members, will be cordially welcomed upon sending their names to the President, Mrs. Nanno Woods, at Headquarters. Everybody bring lunches.—NANNO WOODS.

When she buys groceries wants to KNOW that she is getting the best possible goods the market affords.

And she isn't satisfied until she is positively sure that the articles of food that she orders represent the highest quality attainable. She knows that inferior quality in groceries means waste or poor food or both.

Such a buyer would find this a most satisfactory store.

We delight in pleasing Particular People. The quality of our stocks is always high and our store service excellent. Give this store a Trial.

Ever Tried the Milk Diet?

TO many people milk is merely a beverage. As a matter of fact—it's a food. Indeed, it has been called the perfect food—the complete food. The food value of pure milk cannot be over-estimated.

Milk is the proper diet in most cases where there is poor assimilation of food. Because—its absorption into the system is effected with less energy than ordinary foods require.

But—you ask, "Why can't I take the Milk Diet at home?" That's just the point—you can't take it at home if you want permanent, satisfactory results.

The important feature in taking the Milk Diet is to be under skillful care and medical supervision. Other things are necessary: water treatments, massage, rest, freedom from care and excitement.

This explains why the Milk Diet—if followed out at home—almost invariably proves unsatisfactory and discouraging. The environment is not adapted to it. Then, too, there may be discouraging criticism from family and friends.

If you are thinking of taking the Milk Diet—or if you have a friend so inclined—you should know that the Glendale Sanitarium has unusual facilities for this kind of treatment. You will always find a number of patients here taking the exclusive Milk Diet—and thriving on it!

Tomorrow is a good day to find out about it!

Treatment Rooms open 9 A. M. to 9 P. M., except Saturday. Trained Nurses of both sexes in attendance. For rates and appointment telephone Glendale 2 or Home 1213

CARE OF THE BODY

The last article was closed with the following sentence: "And yet we are told that we do not want better animals." I do not approve of that statement for the reason that, whenever we say that we do not want better animals, it is equivalent to saying that we do not want better men, women and children; or it implies that they are already perfect. And we know that they are not perfect physically.

Now, better physical men, women and children is just what the world most needs; and it needs them above everything else. And if some means is not adopted soon to raise the standard of the youth, and rescue the physical man from deterioration and perishing, the time will soon come when there will be nothing worth saving.

It is an established, recognized, indisputable fact, that man is classified as belonging to the animal kingdom. That much is conceded and needs no further argument. And that also answers the question I asked in my last article, "What was man when he was created." He was just man with a material, physical, animal body that was formed out of the dust of the ground, and all human. And he will remain just man as long as he lives on this earth in his present state. What he would have been if conditions had been different, or what he will be in the future we do not know. What concerns us now is to know what man was and what he is at the present time. What we want to learn now is man's nature, his place in Nature, and what is necessary to bring man up to what we conceive to be his proper physical position and condition in life as the animal man.

"And God said, let us make Man," "And God created Man." "And the Lord God made Man out of the dust of the ground." And that shows man's nature, that he is of the earth—earthly. And it shows man's kinship to the living animal world, which is of the same nature as himself; and also to the inanimate part of Nature of which he is also a part. We were formed out of the dust of the earth; and we live off of the dust of the earth. We are children of Nature. If man was constituted different from what he is now physically, he could not live on this planet unless he followed a different manner of sustaining life from what we do.

Man's rightful place in Nature is at the head of the animal kingdom as its ruler, where he was placed at the time of the creation. And we can regain and maintain that position if we so desire. It is our birthright and our privilege.

We do not know the purpose of the Creator in creating man in the first place. But the very fact that he did create him, and clothe him with the attribute necessary for a world ruler; and give him dominion over the earth and all of its inhabitants, is sufficient to show that he had a definite purpose in bringing man into existence. And as the earth was to be his permanent abiding place, and he was to live on the products of the earth, it is but natural to suppose that the natural, material body formed out of the dust of the ground, was the natural and proper habitation for his environment. And the only one that would harmonize with his surroundings; the manner in which he was to live, and enable him to accomplish the purpose for which he was created.

That he was created for some definite purpose in the great economy of Nature, is evident from the fact that he was made the world ruler; taken into partnership, as it were, with the Creator, and given full dominion and control over the whole earth.

As I said before, man was created perfect physically, and was in perfect harmony with himself; in perfect harmony with Nature; in perfect harmony with his Creator, and in perfect harmony with all creation of which he was a part.

But we are given to understand that man defaulted on his part. That is, that he was recreant to his trust, and that he violated the great confidence that was imposed in him. And that he voluntarily transgressed the physical laws of the kingdom of which he was the head and ruler. Instead of having the laws properly executed he violated them himself and thus became an outlaw, and put himself out of harmony with himself, with Nature, and with the Creator, for which he was banished from his sovereignty. And that which was created for the temple of the Most High became physically unclean, to remain empty until cleansed from all physical defilement. Thus by his own act man put himself out of harmony with all things. And by continuing thus, he has descended the scale to his present deplorable condition, which I am going to contrast with his former condition by giving two pictures, the then, and the now.

Then

Cast your mind's eye down the dim vista of the past to the glorious early morning of creation when the morning stars sang together and the hills clapped their hands for joy; and behold that noble pair—man and woman—as they came forth from the hands of the Creator in all of their pristine physical beauty and perfection. They were the crown jewels which graced the diadem of the new Creation. And being at the height of animal perfection, they were in harmony with themselves; they were in perfect harmony with all other animal life; they were in perfect harmony with Nature of which they were a part; and above all, they were in perfect accord and harmony with their Creator. They were physically clean. Their bodies and physical powers were good for a thousand years. Pain, sickness, disease, and death from disease were unknown. There were no tears, no sighing, and no sorrow. Theirs was the perfect life.

From that perfect pair we claim our descent,—or is it our fall?

Now

Now come down to the present time and make a calm survey of the field of humanity in its broken and dilapidated condition, with all of its tears; its sorrows; its bodily and mental sufferings; its fears; its innumerable and incurable diseases; its plagues; its life destroying vices; and its abnormal appetites. Confine your attention to the most humanized, and the most enlightened section of the globe, the United States of America, where four-fifths of the men are unfit for military duty; where fifteen millions, or three fourths of the children of school age, are known to be defectives; where one out of every five of the children born, die within the first year after birth, and more than one half of them before reaching the age of fifteen years. Then look at the millions of little, weak, sickly specimens of humanity that have scarcely enough vitality in their little bodies to keep the vital spark alive; and, who, whenever there comes a hot day, fade away like the dew before the morning sun, or like snow in the mid-day sun of a hot July day. Where every one is slowly committing suicide, and where no one dies a natural death; where the funeral march never ceases; and where death is the liveliest thing on earth.

When you have well and carefully considered these pictures, and comprehend what the physical condition of man was; what it is now; and understand that it is possible for mankind to regain that perfect physical state, I think your candid judgment will be, we certainly do need better animals.

Who is responsible for the present physical condition of the human race? Man himself is responsible for his own condition.

What has been, and what is the cause of man's physical decline? Ignorance has been the cause. Ignorance of what? Ignorance of the physiological nature of man; ignorance of his physiological requirements and how to supply them, has been the underlying cause of the physical decline of man; and the cause of all the sickness, disease, and bodily and mental ills from which mankind suffer.

"My people perish for the lack of knowledge."

Dr. Haig says, "It thus appears that man's ignorance has inflicted on him a terrible plague of words almost a disease in itself, and of course ignorance is the underlying cause of all disease."

Ignorance of what? Ignorance of Man and how to care for him.

Dr. S. W. Dodd says, "Health and life are preserved by obedience to the laws of physiology, so are they injured or destroyed by transgression of these laws." So transgression of these laws through ignorance is the cause of all the misery and premature deaths that are such a terrible blight to humanity. But it is no longer possible for people to plead ignorance as the cause of their misfortune, for science has made it possible for every one to know the physiological nature of the human body, its needs and how to supply them.

Read what I quoted from Dr. Sager in one of my former articles, "that it is not necessary for a child born of ordinarily healthy parents to have a day of sickness or disease of any kind from its birth until he passes away with old age."

This knowledge can be acquired only by education. Education that will educate the people to know Man—physical, animal Man. And it all rests with man himself to say whether he will acquire this education and wipe out human ills and suffering; save the young life, and raise the race in the scale of existence, or keep on the downward course to destruction.

We have a large number of hospitals, sanitariums, homes and health-resorts, and thousands of doctors to look after the sick, care for the dilapidated and ease down their last days. We have thousands of schools, colleges, seminaries, and other institutions that cost millions of dollars annually to run; that are devoted to training the intellect, and cramming the head with stuff that is of no earthly use,—generally at the expense of the body. We support large scientific institutions presided over by ancient gentlemen with absent minds, where we turn out cranky professors and send them out to investigate the phenomena of the heavens, the earth, and the sea. We study—at great cost—the planetary system, the geology of the earth, and try to delve into infinity after the fourth dimension.

We have a hundred or more different religions with thousands of churches, Sunday schools, missions, and other institutions that are supplied with thousands of laborers and teachers to look after the moral side of humanity; but we have no teachers, no schools, no churches or other institutions of learning devoted to the saving and education of man,—physical man. Is he not worth saving?

It is very pleasant and consoling to have so much interest manifested in our welfare in another existence; but it would be infinitely more pleasant and consoling to have some attention paid to our welfare, here and now, in this present existence.

This earth was prepared for man's dwelling-place. He is a part of this earth. It is his natural home. He has to work out his human destiny here. Here he has to fill his rightful place in the great economy of Nature. This is a probationary state for him. This is his kindergarten in which he is to be fitted for eternity. In order to do this and develop his full natural powers he must bring himself into harmony with nature and the infinite source of all things. And he is entitled to the full time allotted by Nature in which to do this.

As man is an integral part of Nature, we can reason from analogy, in making comparisons between him and other parts of creation. So, let us turn to Nature and learn the lesson it teaches.

All nature teaches us that all created things—animal or plant—has its appointed time to run in the great scheme of life; that there are certain inexorable laws that govern all animal life. Among the lower orders of animals that live in harmony with Nature's laws, that are free to care for themselves, untrammelled by the hand of man, we see these laws work out to perfection. They are born; they live their lives free from care, sickness, or disease; they mature, fulfill their appointed course in Nature and die. It is the same in the vegetable kingdom. Although man is the highest representative of the animal kingdom in the natural world, there is nothing in the teachings of Nature to show that he is not governed by the same general laws that govern all animal and vegetable life,—for all life is one life.

If we were to carry this analogy through to its logical conclusion, it would be this; that the life of man is perpetuated in the life of the offspring.

There is nothing in the record to show—and we have no right to assume—that the Creator has enacted special rules for different classes on this earth. The Creator never intended that man, alone, should die before he had fully developed all of his natural powers. He never intended that millions of millions and untold millions of his little human

BUSINESS PRUDENCE

It is the part of good business prudence to make a connection with a bank where you can enjoy a personal acquaintance with the officers of your bank and be able to transact your business with them.

The business of the world today is done on the basis of commercial credit—and very often upon the extent of that credit depends success or failure.

If you are known here as a reliable depositor—and if you ever need to borrow—your request will be given every consideration.

"And did he do it?"

"Yes, that is where he put most of it."

"Why," he exclaimed, with an eloquent gesture, "my ancestors have had the right to bear arms for the last two hundred years!"

"Hoot, mon," cried the Scot, "my ancestors have had the right to bare legs for the last two thousand years!"

"Well," remarked an American, "that beats hell." Whereat an Englishman standing near, exclaimed, "Bah Jove! How very extensively some of these Americans have traveled."
